- a long course packed into one semester. Yikes
- I liked the course and subject matter. I came into the course knowing some of the material from prior experience with networking outside of class. I felt that the homeworks were too detached from the exam and lecture material. I think the course would be more beneficial if the homeworks focused on the topics we should study or learn for exams as opposed to the questions offered in the book. I found myself spending a lot of time trying to find the same material was not relevant to the exams. When it came time to take the exams I felt I was not prepared for the questions. Again, I enjoyed the course and the material, I just feel that having homework focused on exam material and that goes over example problems would be more helpful for future renditions of the course. I enjoyed the labs and programming assignments, the latter has inspired me to learn Python on my own outside of class. I found that I actually preferred this course being online since I could take notes along with the lectures far easier and go back through the lecture videos to relearn and understand problems.

- Everything seems like an amalgamation and can't stand independent of the other components of the OSI model. It's very memory intensive to succeed.

18 - THE INSTRUCTOR: Please comment on the strengths and weaknesses of Supraja Gurajala. Would you take another course from this instructor? -

- no. A lot of seemingly avoiding questions that get asked. One will ask a question and she'll step around it and answer something sort of related but not at all answer the question given.
- Always available and provided awesome lectures and in class examples. Excited to take more courses with her.
- Yes, Dr. Gurajala's lectures are very engaging and effective. I think getting more feedback on assignments earlier on would have helped me evaluate my understanding better.
- The transition to online made this class a lot more difficult and the lecture videos were kind of hard to track what was going on and learn from them.

- She's like a breath of fresh air where she exudes a non intimidating aura and I appreciate that.
